LIGHTEST VOTE IN HISTORY REPORTED AT VOTING PLACES

ALDERMANIC CANDIDATES ARE URGING VOTERS TO GO TO THE POLLS; FIRST WARD CASTS THE MOST VOTES

With one of the lightest votes cast in this city up until 2 o'clock this afternoon aldermanic candidates are using all of their influence to get the voters to the polls this evening in hopes of landing the council job from their opponents. The storm and the fact that this is an "off year" in elections is blamed, by election officials, for the unusual light vote.

First Leading

The first ward, seventh in regard to the total number of voters, was heading the list at 2 o'clock with 94 votes cast. The fact that a strenuous election campaign between two factions in this ward is the cause for the heavy vote that was cast this morning. Ray Love and W. P. Cummings are the candidates of the two factions.

The second ward, with Ferd Link, present alderman, opposed by Walter Herschleb, with a total number of 295 voters, is second in the number of votes cast. Up until 2 o'clock 78 voters had been to the polls.

Third Ward Unconcerned

In the third ward, where there is no contest, the election is causing little concern as only 15 votes were cast. According to figures derived from the last spring election 391 voters cast their votes at that tome.

Out of 500 voters in the fourth ward only 65 had been to the polls up until 2 o'clock despite the fact that a hot campaign has been waged by W. W. Rickman, present incumbent, and Ernest Krumrei.

39 had cast their votes in the fifth ward where Gustave Henke, now serving as alderman, is opposed by J. N. Sharwecki.

Vote Continues Light

In the sixth ward where two new candidates, Reinholt Henke and William Pribbanow, are contesting for the seat of M. J. Whitrock, veteran alderman who refused to become a candidate this year, the vote is considered very light where only 30 out of a total number of 421 votes had been cast up until 2 o'clock.

The seventh ward has slightly exceeded the sixth in total number of votes cast with 36 ballots reported into the ballot box out of a total number of 368 voters in the ward. Arthur H. Lau and Burt Nason are the candidates.

In the eighth ward where F. F. Mengel is the only candidate for Ben Hanson's seat the vote is extremely light with only 19 votes reported by 2 o'clock.

Butchkavitch Executed By Firing Squad Saturday

(By Associated Press)

Moscow, Russia, Apr. 3—Monsignor Constantine Butchkavitch, Vicar-general of the Roman Catholic church in Russia, condemned to death for willfully opposing the Soviet government, has been executed by a firing squad.

The time of the execution, in doubt since last Thursday when an appeal for clemency was denied, became known today when it was announced that the death sentence had been carried out last Saturday.

The secrecy which surrounded the Soviet executions in the past was carried out in the case of Monzignor Butchkavitch, but it seems probable that he was put to death in a Moscow prison.

Appeals from the outside world which had poured in upon Soviet authorities had no effect in staying of the execution. Protests from all parts of the world were made against execution of the death sentence, the American government joining in the appeal for clemency.

THE WEATHER

Fair west, cloudy east portion tonight, Wednesday generally fair with somewhat warmer north portion.

Local People In Move For Another Trial

Action of some sort, either by petition or some other means is being contemplated in this city by people who express themselves as thoroughly convinced that John Magnuson, convicted of the bomb outrage in which the life of Mrs. Clementine Chapman was taken, is innocent. Persistent rumors have been about the city that a petition was being circulated by those who did not believe that Magnuson was guilty, seeking to have the court set aside the verdict and order a new trial. Those working in behalf of the convicted man state that they have no definite knowledge of such a petition.

Wait Until After Sentence

John Worlund and L. H. Miller, proprietors of the Wood County Tire Shop, who are interested in behalf of the convicted man, express the opinion that there is overwhelming sentiment in the city against the verdict and stated that they had held a conference with those of the same opinion and that they contemplate doing whatever they can in behalf of the convicted man in securing a new trial.

Plans Not Certain

Mr. Miller said that his plans were not definitely formulated as yet but he stated that nothing would be started until after Judge Park had sentenced Magnuson.

He said that to his knowledge no petitions would be given Judge Park on Wednesday when he convenes court again. Mr. Miller stated that he and Mr. Worlund had not become interested in the case until late yesterday and that they had nothing to do with any of the petitions said to have been circulated.

Election Is Quiet Throughout State; Light Vote Cast

(By Associated Press)

Milwaukee, Wis., Apr. 3—With rain falling throughout Wisconsin and a general absence of interest by voters due to lack of sharp contests, today's election promised to be a very quiet one throughout Wisconsin.

Lack of opposition in a number of judicial contests, including that of the justice of the supreme court, confines interest pretty much to the local contests for municipal offices.

In Milwaukee, interest generally centers in the election of seven school directors and the circuit judge, there being opposition in only one judicial contest here. The total vote was extremely light.

Heavy Fall Of Snow Again Postpones Spring's Advent

"April showers bring May flowers" —maybe.

After a slump of a few days Old King Winter came back with a vengeance and drove the raw recruit, Spring back out of the limelight and is again cavorting around on the supposed to be fields of green with little thought for the wishes of the Wisconsin citizen. Every known element of winter entered in on the conspiracy—wind, sleet, slush and snow made the entire day and night disagreeable. According to George T. Nixon, weather observer, the total amount of precipitation Monday was .7 of an inch.

The highest teperature registered yesterday was 45 degrees and the lowest was 29 while the range last year was from 48 to 42 and according to the records no snow was on the ground at this time last year.

A low pressure was centered this morning over Illinois and Wisconsin, causing rains in southern part and light snows over the entire northwest. A high pressure over Saskatchewan is causing below zero temperature along the Canadian border.

Indications point to partly cloudy or generally fair weather, and colder although a light snow is probable.

Intimate Questions Asked In Scientific Probe Of Love

DID YOU SPOON, AND IF SO, HOW FAR DID YOU GO? HYGIENE BUREAU INQUIRES OF COLLEGE WOMEN

New York, Apr. 3—College women throughout the country have been asked by the Bureau of Social Hygiene, Inc., founded by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to answer unusually frank questions concerning love, it was learned today.

Questions put to unmarried women include:

"How old were you when you first began to spoon? What effect, as you estimate it now, did spooning have upon the quality of your character? Will you give the reason why you have not married? What things were most stimulating to you?"

Married women and widows are asked these questions:

Describe "Attraction"

"Has your married life been a happy one? If not, why not? Were you personally attracted toward young men? If so, how would you describe this attraction? Did you indulge with one or more young men? How far did you go in spooning?"

The purpose of the questionaire is to aid in solving the vexed questions of education and hygiene.

"We must have more information about the average woman in order to have reliable guidance in the training of our girls and boys," the institution leaders stated.

"We need information covering the ideas, personal tendencies, personal experience and personal opinion to be of real value. We need the information gotten out of the life experiences of sensible and intelligent women who can be relied upon to furnish thoughtful and frank statements."

Since then he has been giving not a little study to the question and last night he talked for some time with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, on the subject.

BIG ISSUES FACE LEGISLATURE AS SESSION RESUMES

CONTEST OVER PROHBITION ENFORCEMENT PROMISES TO HOLD STAGE CENTER; TAX WRANGLE NOT ENDED

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis. April 3.—Legislators come back to Madison tomorrow to face the tangled problems that developed during the closing days before the Easter recess. With preliminaries cleared out of the way by 10 weeks' activity, members are now determined what the actual accomplishments of the session are to be.

So many issues have been injected into the general controversy in both houses that the result of most of the legislative battles is entirely in doubt. Taxation, prohibition, the eight hour day, the national guard appropriation, unemployment insurance, and highway legislation all remain unsettled problems.

Dry Issue First

Prohibition has suddenly become the outstanding issue in the assembly, the leaders generally say. Herman Sachtjen, Madison, administration floor leader, declared that all important legislation will become entangled in the wet and dry fight. John L. Dahl, the speaker, recognizes this fact, he says. Assemblyman A. E. Matheson, dry leader, places responsibility for the situation on Governor Blaine, who took an avowedly wet stand for the first time, in his special message to the legislature last week.

It is the hope of most of the leaders of the lower house that the prohibition issue can be disposed of April 11, when the Sachtjen bill, drastically amending the search and seizure section of the Severson enforcement statute, comes up for engrossment. This bill, understood to have the sanction of Governor Blaine, would emasculate the state liquor law, and make enforcement impossible, the drys assert.

The wet and dry battle in the assembly will be staged April 11, to be followed on April 12, by public hearing on Governor Blaine's income tax bill, another subject of very heated controversy. There is a belief expressed by assemblymen that the attitude expressed by the government on the prohibition issue, will materially effect assembly action on the administration tax bill, should that measure get through the senate. Here the factional fight between the governor and Speaker Dahl will break out afresh, assemblymen say.

Oppose 8 Hour Law

The upper house attack on the assembly bill providing for an eight hour day in Wisconsin industry, will open tomorrow when the measure is heard by the state affairs committee. Opposition to this proposal by several Progressive Republican senators, is expected to result in its defeat when it reaches the floor.

Then will come the proposal for unemployment insurance, still held in the judiciary committee of the senate. Proponents of this measure are preparing to flood the legislature with petitions favoring this plan shortly before it is decided to bring it to the floor. A favorable committee recommendation is looked for, but the contest on the floor is much in doubt.

The national guard appropriation, a subject of considerable controversy, is being shaped by the joint finance committee. Senator H. J. Severson has a bill in the upper house to repeal the continuing appropriation to the guard, which will probably cause a contest. Contrary to reports, Governor Blaine has not asked the repeal of the national guard continuing appropriation. He asked for repeal of the special $300,000 appropriation to the guard, authorized by the 1919 legislature.

Three Highway Bills

Highway legislation has been complicated by the introduction of two new general bills providing for the establishment of a comprehensive financing program. One of these measures has the backing of the county boards association and the league of Wisconsin municipalities. It calls for a gasoline tax of two cents a gallon, a moderate license fee based upon weight and a two per cent valuation tax in lieu of the present personal property tax. This is considered a comprehensive measure having the best chance to pass.

There is a battle over administration of Wisconsin's educational system still to be staged. Governor Blaine has taken a hand in this by asking that the state board of education be abolished.

So intermingled are the various issued raised by these big problems still remaining for consideration, that the actual accomplishments of the session are all in doubt. The senate has shown a disposition to kill a large share of assembly bills, and the assembly has commenced to reciprocate. This fact coupled with the various factional differences and the wet and dry issue, is expected to tie up the session considerably.

Current Puts Fatal End To Happy Banter

(By Associated Press)

Oklahoma City, Okla., Apr. 3—While Troy Hocker and Hugh Simpson, linemen for the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company cut and spliced wires on the top of a pole here yesterday, they exchanged good-natured banter, giving no thought to the time. The hands of the clock down at the power house crept past 4:40, but the men on the pole did not look at their watches.

The engineer at the power house glanced at the clock. It was 4:57, time to throw the current into the arc light circuit. He deliberately pulled down the switch that sent 2300 volts coursing through the power circuit to light the city.

The banter ceased out on the pole. The bodies of Hocker and Simpson grew rigid, straining in the belts that held them to the pole. Those down below laughed. Hocker and Simpson were performing some new antics.

Then smoke was seen to issue from Hocker's shoe. Linemen down below know thew were witnessing a tragedy. Down at the power house the engineer looked through his instrument. The amperage was fluctuating and the engineer knew something was wrong.

He threw off the power. The bodies of Hocker and Simpson slumped down swooning in their belts. Hocker had died when brought to the ground. Simpson was badly burned and doctors say he will die.

Open New Suit Against Benton Harbor Colony

(By Associated Press)

Lansing, Mich., Apr. 3—Quo warranto proceedings to compel officials of the House of David colony to show cause why the organization should not be disbanded, were instituted in Ingham county circuit court here today by the state of Michigan.

The proceedings follow closely upon the hearing last week at Grand Rapids of the suit for accounting brought against the colony by John Hansell and wife of Nashville, Tenn. At this hearing charges of fraud and immorality were made by the plaintiff.

In effect, the new proceedings are a demand upon the heads of the cult that they appear to defend its activities and show that it has not been conducted and organized in violation of the state laws, and offer defense to the charges of the state that it should be disbanded and put out of business so far as its establishment in Michigan is concerned.

If officials of the cult wish to offer a defense it will necessitate their appearance in court, including it is believed, Benjamin Purnell, head of the organization.

Whiskey Thieves Make Big Haul In Baltimore

(By Associated Press)

Baltimore, Md., April 3—Whiskey thieves broke into one of the Spring Gardens general bonded warehouses No. 1 district of Maryland here early today, bound three watchmen and carried away three large truckloads of liquor.

Police authorities at once began a state wide search for the whiskey laden truck.

The state announced that as soon as a verdict is returned it will ask the trial of Charles E. Ruthenberger of Cleveland, one of Foster's co-defendants, to be set for next Monday.

Uphold Right To Search Homes Without A Warrant

(By Associated Press)

At the same time, the court in another decision held that it was an invasion of constitutional rights for an officer to search automobiles for liquor without having a warrant.

Call On Citizens Of Soo To Clear Streets Of Snow

(By Associated Press)

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Apr. 3—City officials here today were planning a shoveling bee to clean the streets of snow which has drifted in some places to a depth of fifteen feet. A call was sent out for five hundred citizens to arm themselves with shovels and attack the drifts against which the street sweepers and snow plows are useless.

BIG ISSUES FACE LEGISLATURE AS SESSION RESUMES

CONTEST OVER PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT PROMISES TO HOLD STAGE CENTER; TAX WRANGLE NOT ENDED

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis. April 3.—Legislators come back to Madison tomorrow to face the tangled problems that developed during the closing days before the Easter recess. With preliminaries cleared out of the way by 10 weeks' activity, members are now determined what the actual accomplishments of the session are to be.

So many issues have been injected into the general controversy in both houses that the result of most of the legislative battles is entirely in doubt. Taxation, prohibition, the eight hour day, the national guard appropriation, unemployment insurance, and highway legislation all remain unsettled problems.

Dry Issue First

Prohibition has suddenly become the outstanding issue in the assembly, the leaders generally say. Herman Sachtjen, Madison, administration floor leader, declared that all important legislation will become entangled in the wet and dry fight. John L. It is the hope of most of the leaders of the lower house that the prohibition issue can be disposed of April 11, when the Sachtjen bill, drastically amending the search and seizure section of the Severson enforcement statute, comes up for engrossment. This bill, understood to have the sanction of Governor Blaine, would emasculate the state liquor law, and make enforcement impossible, the drys assert.

The wet and dry battle in the assembly will be staged April 11, to be followed on April 12, by public hearing on Governor Blaine's income tax bill, another subject of very heated controversy. There is a belief expressed by assemblymen that the attitude expressed by the government on the prohibition issue, will materially effect assembly action on the administration tax bill, should that measure get through the senate. The upper house attack on the assembly bill providing for an eight hour day in Wisconsin industry, will open tomorrow when the measure is heard by the state affairs committee. Opposition to this proposal by several Progressive Republican senators, is expected to result in its defeat when it reaches the floor.

Then will come the proposal for unemployment insurance, still held in the judiciary committee of the senate. Proponents of this measure are preparing to flood the legislature with petitions favoring this plan shortly before it is decided to bring it to the floor. A favorable committee recommendation is looked for, but the contest on the floor is much in doubt.

The national guard appropriation, a subject of considerable controversy, is being shaped by the joint finance committee. Senator H. J. Severson has a bill in the upper house to repeal the continuing appropriation to the guard, which will probably cause a contest, Contrary to reports, Governor Blaine has not asked the repeal of the national guard continuing appropriation. He asked for repeal of the special $300,000 appropriation to the guard, authorized by the 1919 legislature.

Three Highway Bills

Highway legislation has been complicated by the introduction of two new general bills providing for the establishment of a comprehensive financing program. One of these measures has the backing of the county boards association and the league of Wisconsin municipalities. It calls for a gasoline tax of two cents a gallon, a moderate license fee based upon weight and a two per cent valuation tax in lieu of the present personal property tax. This is considered a comprehensive measure having the best chance to pass.

There is a battle over administration of Wisconsin's educational system still to be staged. Governor Blaine has taken a hand in this by asking that the state board of education be abolished.

So intermingled are the various issued raised by these big problems still remaining for consideration, that the actual accomplishments of the session are all in doubt. The senate has shown a disposition to kill a large share of assembly bills, and the assembly has commenced to reciprocate. This fact coupled with the various factional differences and the wet and dry issue, is expected to tie up the session considerably.

Current Puts Fatal End To HappyBanter

(By Associated Press)

Oklahoma City, Okla., Apr. 3—While Troy Hocker and Hugh Simpson, linemen for the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company cut and spliced wires on the top of a pole here yesterday, they exchanged good-natured banter, giving no thought to the time. The hands of the clock down at the power house crept past 4:40, but the men on the pole did not look at their watches.

The engineer at the power house glanced at the clock. It was 4:57, time to throw the current into the arc light circuit. He deliberately pulled down the switch that sent 2300 volts coursing through the power circuit to light the city.

The banter ceased out on the pole. The bodies of Hocker and Simpson grew rigid, straining in the belts that held them to the pole. Those down below laughed. Hocker and Simpson were performing some new antics.

Then smoke was seen to issue from Hocker's shoe. Linemen down below know thew were witnessing a tragedy. Down at the power house the engineer looked through his instrument. The amperage was fluctuating and the engineer knew something was wrong.

He threw off the power. The bodies of Hocker and Simpson slumped down swooning in their belts. Hocker had died when brought to the ground. Simpson was badly burned and doctors say he will die.

Open New Suit Against Benton Harbor Colony

(By Associated Press)

Lansing, Mich., Apr. 3—Quo warranto proceedings to compel officials of the House of David colony to show cause why the organization should not be disbanded, were instituted in Ingham county circuit court here today by the state of Michigan.

The proceedings follow closely upon the hearing last week at Grand Rapids of the suit for accounting brought against the colony by John Hausell and wife of Nashville, Tenn. At this hearing charges of fraud and immorality were made by the plaintiff.

In effect, the new proceedings are a demand upon the heads of the cult that they appear to defend its activities and show that it has not been conducted and organized in violation of the state laws, and offer defense to the charges of the state that it should be disbanded and put out of business so far as its establishment in Michigan is concerned.

If officials of the cult wish to offer a defense it will necessitate their appearance in court, including it is believed, Benjamin Purnell, head of the organization.

Whiskey Thieves Make Big Haul In Baltimore

(By Associated Press)

Baltimore, Md., April 3—Whiskey thieves broke into one of the Spring Gardens general bonded warehouses No. 1 district of Maryland here early today, bound three watchmen and carried away three large truckloads of liquor.

The watchmen were liberated two hours later by a Baltimore & Ohio trainman who heard their cries for help. They said there were forty men in the gang. The guards were quickly overpowered and the thieves made quick work of loading barrels of whiskey on the trucks and getting away.

Police authorities at once began a state wide search for the whiskey laden truck.

STATE DEMANDS CONVICTION FOR RADICAL LEADER

MICHIGAN CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM CASE MAY CLOSE TODAY; RUTHENBERGER TRIAL WILL COME NEXT

(By Associated Press)

St. Joseph, Mich., Apr. 3—The defense of American institutions demands the conviction of W. Z. Foster of Chicago, charged with violation of the Michigan law against criminal syndicalism, the state argued today in the closing arguments at Foster's trial.

Attended Convention

Foster was arrested as a result of attending a convention of the Communist party of America held on the lonely dunes on the shore of Lake Michigan last August. He is the first of thirty-two arrested after the convention, to face trial.

Charles Gore, state's attorney for Berrien county, opened for the prosecution with a plea of conviction which carries a sentence of ten years in prison or a fine of $5,000 or both, at the discretion of the court.

Ruthenberger Next

If arguments are completed in time, Judge Charles White will deliver his instructions and give the case to the jury this evening.

The state announced that as soon as a verdict is returned it will ask the trial of Charles E. Ruthenberger of Cleveland, one of Foster's co-defendants, to be set for next Monday.

Uphold Right To Search Homes Without A Warrant

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis. Apr. 3—The right of prohibition officers to search homes attached to places licensed to sell non-intoxicating beverages without a warrant was upheld by a decision of the Wisconsin supreme court today.

At the same time, the court in another decision held that it was an invasion of constitutional rights for an officer to search automobiles for liquor without having a warrant.

Call On Citizens Of Soo To Clear Streets Of Snow

(By Associated Press)

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Apr. 3—City officials here today were planning a shoveling bee to clean the streets of snow which has drifted in some places to a depth of fifteen feet. A call was sent out for five hundred citizens to arm themselves with shovels and attack the drifts against which the street sweepers and snow plows are useless.

No end of winter was in sight today with the weather bureau predicting more snow. Six inches of snow fell last night. The temperature was thirteen below zero. This mark was sixteen degrees lower than the previous record for April established 35 years ago.

[illegible] Thompson, from Chicago politics the outside world was led to believe that corruption and crooked practices of the past and that an era of good will, clean elections, and honest and efficient city government was about to be ushered in. The press heralded Arthur Lueder and Judge Wm. It was all too good to be true. As election day approached charges and counter-charges of graft and corruption were made, and ancient history was searched for possible past indiscretions on the part of the two candidates. The worst of all, for want of any real issue between the two, the religious question was dragged in by the ears and promises to be an important factor in the election today.

We know little of the qualifications of the two men, and at this distance it makes no difference to the people of Wisconsin Rapids who is elected. If, as seems to be the case, the worst that can be said against Judge Dever is that he is a member of the Roman Catholic church, that ought to be a pretty fair indication that he is well qualified for the office to which he aspires. Lueder, on the other hand, is condemned for his German descent, an equally nonsensical sort of political argument.

Religion, race and trumped up personalities have no place in American politics. Where they are introduced the voter may be confident that it is for the purpose of obscuring the real issue or else that pinheaded fanatics are trying to introduce their own petty prejudices without the consent of the principals in the case. Probably the latter is the case in Chicago.

The test of citizenship and capacity for public office is neither religious or racial and the only attempt to introduce such tests are merely demonstrating their own incapacity for the genuine Americanism that recognizes such things as utterly foreign and outside the realms of politics and government. Aside from the platform on which he stands, the only test of a man's worthiness for public honors is he himself, and that goes for every creed and every race.

FUEL SHORTAGE IS THOUGHT POSSIBLE

WISCONSIN COMMITTEE WARNS DOMESTIC CONSUMERS TO STORE NEXT WINTER'S COAL IN SPRING OR SUMMER

Madison, Wis.—Domestic consumers of coal in Wisconsin are advised by the state fuel committee to purchase their next winter's coal supply during the spring and summer months in order to guard against another season's shortage.

The committee suggests that consumers will benefit themselves and further industry by their early acquisition of fuel supplies. It urges dealers actively to offer to early buyers.

"The consumers would benefit from the fact that they are likely to get a cleaner and better prepared coal in warmer weather," a statement issued by the committee says.

Study Storage Scheme

"The problems and possibilities of community or town storage are now being studied under a combined arrangement of the department of commerce of the United States Coal Commission and the federal and state fuel administrators. It is hoped to work out some definite plan that will be a benefit eventually, not only to the consumer but also to the mine operator, the railroads, the wholesale and retail dealers.

"But as this plan would be for possible future development and could hardly be put into effect this year, the advisability of summer storage of household coal is emphasized and urged as beneficial to the consumer generally, as well as to transportation interests, distributors and retailers."

The state coal committee suggests that there might again be labor difficulties at the mines next summer and if this occurs points that another shortage would have to be contended with.

"The household consumer should give this possibility consideration, remember the long idle experience during the winter just past and what another stoppage of anthracite production might mean," the statement concludes.

A Personal Experience With Standard Oil

"Chicago, March 7.—I read with a great deal of interest the editorial, "Shall Ruin Be the Penalty of Success," in connection with the report of the senate committee attacking the various Standard Oil companies.

I want to take this opportunity of relating my personal experience with the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Having changed from a coal to an oil burning furnace, I was in the market for fuel oil, and after figuring with several oil companies I closed a contract with the Standard Oil of Indiana, simply because their contract was more liberal and advantageous to me in every way.

I secured cheaper oil, better oil, and first class service."
D. G. Moustakis

The letter reprinted above appeared in the Voice of the People columns of a Chicago newspaper, March 9, 1923.

Cheaper oil — better oil — and first class service.

That, in terse simple terms, expresses the ideals which have made the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) big.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is big because it is called upon to render a big service. Its financial statement deals in big figures because it does an enormous volume of business in a multiplicity of products entering innumerable fields of industry.

Because the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) manufactures a great number of useful products from a single basic material, it is able to cut the manufacturing cost of each item in a way that accrues to the benefit and financial advantage of the consumer whether he buys a quart or a carload.

I want to take this opportunity of relating my personal experience with the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Having changed from a coal to an oil burning furnace, I was in the market for fuel oil, and after figuring with several oil companies I closed a contract with the Standard Oil of Indiana, simply because their contract was more liberal and advantageous to me in every way.

I secured cheaper oil, better oil, and first class service."
D. G. Moustakis

The letter reprinted above appeared in the Voice of the People columns of a Chicago newspaper, March 9, 1923.

Cheaper oil — better oil — and first class service.

That, in terse simple terms, expresses the ideals which have made the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) big.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is big because it is called upon to render a big service. Its financial statement deals in big figures because it does an enormous volume of business in a multiplicity of products entering innumerable fields of industry.

Because the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) manufactures a great number of useful products from a single basic material, it is able to cut the manufacturing cost of each item in a way that accrues to the benefit and financial advantage of the consumer whether he buys a quart or a carload.

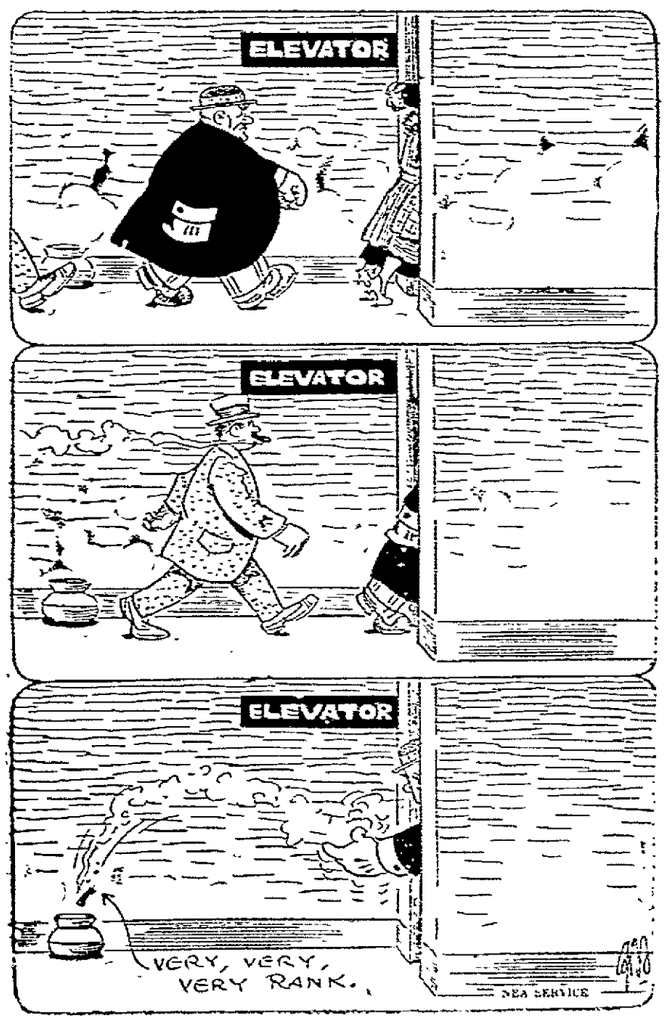
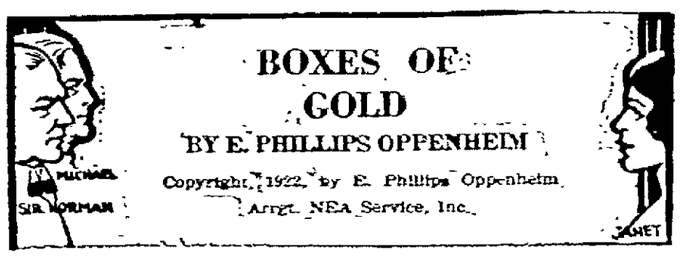
EVERETT TRUE — BY CONDO





BOXES OF GOLD

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Copyright, 1922, by E. Phillips Oppenheim.
Arrgt. NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Vendetta begins between
MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and
SIR NORMAN GREYES, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayers' beautiful housemaid,
JANET, saves him from Sir Norman by shooting dead an officer sent to arrest him. Janet becomes Sayers' wife and accomplice.

Michael plots to rob two men, Gorty and Metzger, of seven boxes of gold brought into England to establish private credits. It is arranged for two masqueraders, Mr. and Mrs. Jose de Miguel, to assist Michael. During the absence of Gorty, Madam de Miguel entices Metzger to her hotel room where Michael renders him unconscious. The boxes of gold are substituted for luggage taken from the hotel by the de Miguels, who leave for parts unknown. Greyes is called to investigate.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY

Sir Norman Continues:

"I do," was the confident reply. "He was chased out of the States; we have granted an extradition warrant against him on the charge of manslaughter: we have watched every steamship at every port; yet I don't mind confessing to you that we have reason to believe that he is in London at the present moment and in touch with his old associates."

* * *

Notwithstanding Rimmington's conviction, I started on no mad quest of my enemy. Indeed, I had no inspiration as to where to begin my search. Janet had left Albermarle Court and had not replied to the various notes I had written her. I had a vague idea that there was danger in prosecuting inquiries for her too closely. I had an idea, too, which was by no means vague, that I was being watched. There was always a loiterer of some sort or another in the street when I entered or left my rooms. I felt surreptitious eyes upon me often, when I lunched or dined or visited the theater. Once I walked home late through Lansdowne Passage, and heard the patter of rubber-shod feet behind me. I swung around, and my pursuer, whoever he was, a burly but agile figure, took refuge in flight.

It was about three weeks after the attack upon Metzger and the disappearance of the gold, when I received a most unexpected visitor. I heard a shrill, foreign voice in the hall overriding my servant's objections, and a moment later a man entered unannounced and evidently in a state of some excitement.

"You are Sir Norman Greyes?" he said. "I am Gorty. I came to this country of cutthroats with Metzger—with him who lies in the hospital. Will you listen to me?"

I motioned to Adams to leave us, and wheeled round an easy-chair for my visitor.

"What am I to think?" he demanded fiercely. "I come from a great but poor government. With much trouble we got together the gold with which to buy materials in this country and open credits. It is you who are supposed to be more civilized than any other country. I go to Manchester to speak at a meeting. I come back, and what do I find? My comrade brutally assaulted, my country's gold stolen! Yes, and that in the heart of your London—in the center of your civilization! What am I to think of you, then, as a people, I ask?"

"It was a most unusual crime," I told him, "but you must remember that you were taking grave risks in having a large amount of gold like that unguarded in your room. The police, however, are doing—"

"The police?" he almost shrieked. "Your police? They are imbeciles—imbeciles, or rascals, I know not which! And as to having the money unguarded, how could we help it? They are many banks in London who say we owe them money. What would have happened if I had deposited my gold there? They would surely have annexed it. And as it is, do you believe that it is an ordinary thief who has robbed us. No!

"I am afraid," I said, "that you are taking a very extreme view of things. However, under the circumstances I cannot blame you for feeling ill used. Tell me what brings you here."

"Ten years ago," he went on, suddenly calmer, "I was in the service of the police of my country. There was an anarchist plot. Three criminals escaped to London. You were at Scotland Yard, and I came to see you. You found me those criminals."

"Tell me what can I do for you?" I asked.

"Find me my gold," he demanded. "Find me the man who attacked Metzger."

* * *

Sir Norman Talks:

He drew his easy-chair a little closer to mine. He eyed my box of cigarettes hungrily. I placed it by his side, and handed him a match. He smoked furiously.

"Listen," he confided; "I have a piece of evidence. I will not take it to the police. I do not trust them. You shall find me my gold."

"What is your piece of evidence?" I asked.

"The little gray man," he answered, "the man whom they spoke of as visiting the South Americans in the next suite. Ah, those South Americans—I never trusted them! I saw Madam makes eyes at Metzger. What need had she of Metzger. A woman like that has lovers enough."

"About the little gray man?" I ventured.

"They speak of him in the evidence," Gorty went on eagerly. "He was at the suite that night. I saw him with Madam the South American, two days before. I know where he is to be found now."

"Why the devil haven't you told the police?" I exclaimed. "That is the one man they are looking for."

"But have I not explained?" he expostulated. "I do not trust the police. Six of those solemn constables would march up in uniform to the place I spoke of, and the little gray man would slip away. I tell you, You must find him and see who he is. You must consider how to act. The assault upon Metzger was bad, but it is the gold I want."

A MOMENT LATER A MAN ENTERED UNANNOUNCED AND EVIDENTLY IN A STATE OF SOME EXCITEMENT.

"Very well," I said, "tell me where to find him."

"Go to the reading-room at the British Museum between eleven and one o'clock," Gorty told me. "You will find him there, reading. I myself am a student. Twice I have sat at the next table. He is reading from some rare volumes the 'History of the Rosicrucians.'"

"Between eleven and one," I repeated.

"You will go?"

"Tomorrow morning," I promised.

Gorty rose.

"Listen, Greyes," he said, "—you, Sir Norman Greyes. Will you swear that if you recover my gold, it comes to me?"

"I swear it," I answered.

"Then through that man you will find it," he declared.

Gorty was right. The moment when, from my place of concealment, I saw him come shuffling into the reading-room and take his place nearly opposite to me at the great round table, I knew very well that this was Michael. He carried with him two or three books, a volume of reference and a notebook. He had the appearance of the most devout bibliophile, and indeed having watched him for some time, I came to the conclusion that he was in earnest about his labors. It was in these ways that Michael achieved real greatness. Detail was a passion with him. He not only appeared to be deeply interested in the Rosicrucian history. He had actually become so.

I was without doubt at fault not to have at once passed on my information to Rimmington and to have had my old adversary arrested on one of the many previous counts against him. It seemed to me, however, that this would bring to an end our chances of recovering the gold, and I would not ignore the fact that I was indebted to Gorty for the information which had delivered Michael into my hands. I therefore maintained a strict watch, and waited.

For three days and three nights I knew Michael's every movement. He made his own breakfast, lunched at a small restaurant near the Museum, and dined each night at the Monico, where he sometimes played dominoes for an hour afterward, if able to find an opponent. On the fourth night, however, he departed from his usual practices. The young woman whom I had been employing to watch him came to me in haste.

"Our friend," she announced, "called at the Monico but took only an aperitif there. He walked across to Romano's and has ordered a table and dinner for two."

"Whereabouts?" I asked quickly.

"Downstairs in the restaurant, on the right-hand side," she replied.

I rang up Romano's and engaged one of the tables in the balcony. In a quarter of an hour I was ensconced there behind the curtain, with Miss Rose Weston, the young woman who had brought me the news of Michael's change of plans, as my companion. She had found time to change into evening clothes, and she played her part exceedingly well. We should have passed anywhere as a very ordinary couple, indulging in a somewhat pronounced dinner flirtation. I kept my eye, however, on the table at which Michael was seated below, and in due course I was rewarded. A very elegant, quietly dressed woman came into the restaurant and sank into the chair by his side. I saw at once that it was Janet.

"What you expected?" my companion asked quickly.

"In a sense," I admitted. "Remember, when they leave, it is the woman you follow."

I watched them closely from behind the curtain. There was no more distinguished-looking woman in the room than Janet, or more beautiful. She talked in a low tone to her companion, and her manner was often earnest. Nevertheless she never smiled. She was different in that respect from every one of the diners by whom she was surrounded. There was not a suggestion of festivity about her. She ate moderately, drank sparingly, and talked. All the time she gave one the impression of a great weariness. Toward the end of the meal, what I had been watching for happened. She opened her handbag and passed something across the table. It was about the size and shape of an ordinary shotgun cartridge, but I felt certain, from the way she handled it, that it was heavy. I knew then that we were on the right track.

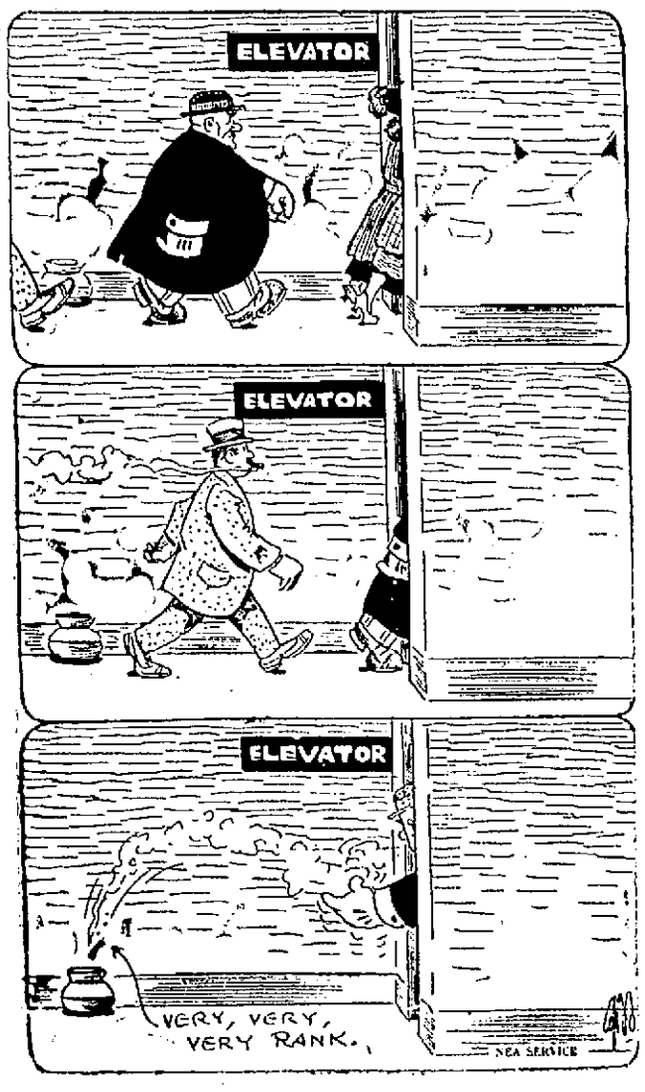
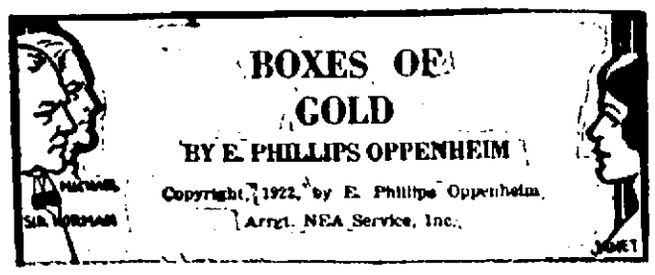
EVERETT TRUE — BY CONDO





BEGIN HERE TODAY

Vendetta begins between

MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and

SIR NORMAN GREYES, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayers' beautiful housemaid,

JANET, saves him from Sir Norman by shooting dead an officer sent to arrest him. Janet becomes Sayers' wife and accomplice.

Michael plots to rob two men, Gorty and Metzger, of seven boxes of gold brought into England to establish private credits. It is arranged for two masqueraders, Mr. and Mrs. Jose de Miguel, to assist Michael. During the absence of Gorty, Madam de Miguel entices Metzger to her hotel room where Michael renders him unconscious. The boxes of gold are substituted for luggage taken from the hotel by the de Miguels, who leave for parts unknown. Greyes is called to investigate.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY

Sir Norman Continues:

"I do," was the confident reply. "He was chased out of the States; we have granted an extradition warrant against him on the charge of manslaughter; we have watched every steamship at every port; yet I don't mind confessing to you that we have reason to believe that he is in London at the present moment and in touch with his old associates."

* * *

Notwithstanding Rimmington's conviction, I started on no mad quest of my enemy. Indeed, I had no inspiration as to where to begin my search. Janet had left Albemarle Court and had not replied to the various notes I had written her. I had a vague idea that there was danger in prosecuting inquiries for her too closely. I had an idea, too, which was by no means vague, that I was being watched. There was always a loiterer of some sort or another in the street when I entered or left my rooms. I felt surreptitious eyes upon me often, when I lunched or dined or visited the theater. Once I walked home late through Lansdowne Passage, and heard the patter of rubber-shod feet behind me. I swung around, and my pursuer, whoever he was, a burly but agile figure, took refuge in flight.

It was about three weeks after the attack upon Metzger and the disappearance of the gold, when I received a most unexpected visitor. I heard a shrill, foreign voice in the hall overriding my servant's objections, and a moment later a man entered unannounced and evidently in a state of some excitement.

"You are Sir Norman Greyes?" he said. "I am Gorty. I came to this country of cutthroats with Metzger—with him who lies in the hospital. Will you listen to me?"

I motioned to Adams to leave us, and wheeled round an easy-chair for my visitor.

"What am I to think?" he demanded fiercely. "I come from a great but poor government. With much trouble we got together the gold with which to buy materials in this country and open credits. It is you who are supposed to be more civilized than any other country. I go to Manchester to speak at a meeting. I come back, and what do I find? My comrade brutally assaulted, my country's gold stolen! Yes, and that in the heart of your London—in the center of your civilization! What am I to think of you, then, as a people, I ask?"

"It was a most unusual crime," I told him, "but you must remember that you were taking grave risks in having a large amount of gold like that unguarded in your room. The police, however, are doing—"

"The police?" he almost shrieked. "Your police? They are imbeciles—imbeciles, or rascals, I know not which! And as to having the money unguarded, how could we help it? They are many banks in London who say we owe them money. What would have happened if I had deposited my gold there? They would surely have annexed it. And as it is, do you believe that it is an ordinary thief who has robbed us No!

"I am afraid," I said, "that you are taking a very extreme view of things. However, under the circumstances I cannot blame you for feeling ill used. Tell me what brings you here."

"Ten years ago," he went on, suddenly calmer, "I was in the service of the police of my country. There was an anarchist plot. Three criminals escaped to London. You were at Scotland Yard, and I came to see you. You found me those criminals."

"Tell me what can I do for you?" I asked.

"Find me my gold," he demanded. "Find me the man who attacked Metzger."

* * *

Sir Norman Talks:

He drew his easy-chair a little closer to mine. He eyed my box of cigarettes hungrily. I placed it by his side, and handed him a match. He smoked furiously.

"Listen," he confided; "I have a piece of evidence. I will not take it to the police. I do not trust them. You shall find me my gold."

"What is your piece of evidence?" I asked.

"The little gray man," he answered, "the man whom they spoke of as visiting the South Americans in the next suite. Ah, those South Americans—I never trusted them! I saw Madam makes eyes at Metzger. What need had she of Metzger. A woman like that has lovers enough."

"About the little gray man?" I ventured.

"They speak of him in the evidence," Gorty went on eagerly. "He was at the suite that night. I saw him with Madam the South American, two days before. I know where he is to be found now."

"Why the devil haven't you told the police?" I exclaimed. "That is the one man they are looking for."

"But have I not explained?" he expostulated. "I do not trust the police. Six of those solemn constables would march up in uniform to the place I spoke of, and the little gray man would slip away. I tell you. You must find him and see who he is. You must consider how to act. The assault upon Metzger was bad, but it is the gold I want."

A MOMENT LATER A MAN ENTERED UNANNOUNCED AND EVIDENTLY IN A STATE OF SOME EXCITEMENT.

"Very well," I said, "tell me where to find him."

"Go to the reading-room at the British Museum between eleven and one o'clock," Gorty told me. "You will find him there, reading. I myself am a student. Twice I have sat at the next table. He is reading from some rare volumes the 'History of the Rosicrucians.'"

"Between eleven and one," I repeated.

"You will go?"

"Tomorrow morning," I promised.

Gorty rose.

"Listen, Greyes," he said, "—you, Sir Norman Greyes. Will you swear that if you recover my gold, it comes to me?"

"I swear it," I answered.

"Then through that man you will find it," he declared.

* * *

Gorty was right. The moment when, from my place of concealment, I saw him come shuffling into the reading-room and take his place nearly opposite to me at the great round table, I knew very well that this was Michael. He carried with him two or three books, a volume of reference and a notebook. He had the appearance of the most devout bibliophile, and indeed having watched him for some time, I came to the conclusion that he was in earnest about his labors. It was in these ways that Michael achieved real greatness. Detail was a passion with him. He not only appeared to be deeply interested in the Rosicrucian history. He had actually become so.

I was without doubt at fault not to have at once passed on my information to Rimmington and to have had my old adversary arrested on one of the many previous counts against him. It seemed to me, however, that this would bring to an end our chances of recovering the gold, and I would not ignore the fact that I was indebted to Gorty for the information which had delivered Michael into my hands. I therefore maintained a strict watch, and waited.

For three days and three nights I knew Michael's every movement. He made his own breakfast, lunched at a small restaurant near the Museum, and dined each night at the Monico, where he sometimes played dominoes for an hour afterward, if able to find an opponent. On the fourth night, however, he departed from his usual practices. The young woman whom I had been employing to watch him came to me in haste.

"Our friend," she announced, "called at the Monico but took only an aperitif there. He walked across to Romano's and has ordered a table and dinner for two.

"Whereabouts?" I asked quickly.

"Downstairs in the restaurant, on the right-hand side," she replied.

I rang up Romano's and engaged one of the tables in the balcony. In a quarter of an hour I was ensconced there behind the curtain, with Miss Rose Weston, the young woman who had brought me the news of Michael's change of plans, as my companion. She had found time to change into evening clothes, and she played her part exceedingly well. We should have passed anywhere as a very ordinary couple, indulging in a somewhat pronounced dinner flirtation. I kept my eye, however, on the table at which Michael was seated below, and in due course I was rewarded. A very elegant, quietly dressed woman came into the restaurant and sank into the chair by his side. I saw at once that it was Janet.

"What you expected?" my companion asked quickly.

"In a sense," I admitted. "Remember, when they leave, it is the woman you follow."

I watched them closely from behind the curtain. There was no more distinguished-looking woman in the room than Janet, or more beautiful. She talked in a low tone to her companion, and her manner was often earnest. Nevertheless she never smiled. She was different in that respect from every one of the diners by whom she was surrounded. There was not a suggestion of festivity about her. She ate moderately, drank sparingly, and talked. All the time she gave one the impression of a great weariness. Toward the end of the meal, what I had been watching for happened. She opened her handbag and passed something across the table. It was about the size and shape of an ordinary shotgun cartridge, but I felt certain, from the way she handled it, that it was heavy. I knew then that we were on the right track.

What Is Your Brand Of Notoriety ?

Picture patrons who are tired of make-believe and want true-to-life screen stories will get their fill in the eight-reel society drama of a girl who fell for false flattery. The picture looks as if it is taken from real life, and is called "Notoriety." Six favorite stars, and a brilliant director make this production stand out head and shoulders above the average.

The story is based on fact, not fancy, and carries truth with it. The settings are faithful—pathetic in the tenement house scenes and brilliant and dazzling in the ballroom sets. The cast is also flawless, and has none but stars—Maurice Powers, Mary Alden, Rod La Roque, George Hackathorne, Richard Travers, J. Barney Sherry and Anders Randolf.

"I Want To Be Admired"—Cried the Tenement Girl in "Notoriety." She got what she wanted—She was Admired—but it was for her weakness. Not her Virtue.

"Send Me To Prison!"

"Keep me in my cell," begged the tenement girl in Will Nigh's life-like photoplay—

"NOTORIETY"

"When I was innocent nobody noticed me. But now that I'm mixed up in a society scandal, everybody admires me. The papers are full of my pictures. I DON'T WANT TO BE FREED—I WANT TO STAY IN PRISON AND BE TALKED ABOUT!"

HISTORY OF YOUR CHURCH

Every week the Tribune will run the history of one Wisconsin Rapids church and the life story of its pastor.

EAST SIDE LUTHERAN CHURCH

In tracing the history of the church, now commonly known as the East Side Lutheran Church, back to its earliest dates it was found that exact records are unavailable and it was necessary to rely solely upon the reminiscences of its charter members, a number of whom are still living in this city. According to these reminiscences German Lutheran church work dates back to the periods immediately following the civil war, 1865 to 1869, when two traveling ministers, S. Esthel and P. Hoffman, preached in this city intermittently for several years.

Services in Home

Services were first held in the old John Pienke, Sr. home on the corner of Wisconsin and Ninth streets. The beginning was small and quite unpretentious, rough pine plank lumber being placed across chairs to provide seats for those attending. With the exception of these services in the John Pienke home the services were few and far between and some of the people, in order to feed their starving souls and especially partake of Holy Communion, would attend the Lutheran churches at Kellner and the Town of Sigel, often walking the entire distances.

Later, because of increasing attendance, services were held in the old court house, on First street north, and were conducted by the Rev. F. Leyhe, of the Kellner Lutheran Church. In 1883 Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Congregation was formally organized and incorporated with a membership of approximately 40 families and the Rev. F. Leyne was installed as first pastor. In this year the first church building was erected and dedicated with much rejoicing.

Served 19 Years

In 1886 the Rev. Julius Bittner assumed charge of the work as the first resident pastor and during his 19 years of untiring, unselfish labor the congregation experienced continuous and phenomenal growth, building a parish school and acquiring a parsonage.

Following Rev. Bittner, the Rev. H. Maack served the church until May, 1912 and during his pastorate the present spacious and beautiful church edifice was erected and dedicated. In 1912 Rev. Maack was succeeded by the Rev. F. W. Pautz, who served the parish faithfully for eight years. He was succeeded by the present pastor, the Rev. F. H. Kretzschmar, in July, 1920. During all these years the parish grew until it now numbers 250 families and over 800 souls.

Fine Parish School

Intimately connected and interwoven with the life and progress of this parish is the history of its christian day school. The members were at all times keenly alive to the fact that a generation of God-fearing church members and christian citizens can be reared solely by christian training, with the church substituting for and supplementing the home training through the medium of a parish school.

Because of this knowledge we find a little school building near the church away back in 1888 playing its part in the life of the parish, the pastor being its first teacher. In 1890 Mr. Schaefer, a graduate of the Lutheran Teachers College, Addison, Ill., was called as the first regular teacher, serving three years. Other teachers serving the school at various periods were: Hugo Olderer, Herman Traes, H. Richert, and L. Borlack; with the Misses Regina Rohrlack, Clara Knoll and Doris Kleberg as intermittent assistants. The present faculty consists of the following: Mr. L. H. Voskamp, principal; and Miss Doris Zolz, teacher. The present school has an enrollment of 141 and is located on the corner of Oak and Eleventh streets.

Church Officers

The officers of the congregation are as follows: A. A. Lemke, president; L. H. Voskamp, recording secretary; H. C. Fehr, financial secretary; Wm. C. Schroeder, treasurer; F. Koppel, Herman Kurt, Henry Brooks, trustees.

W. Bickmann, H. Kurtz, A. Arndt, Wm. Kurtz, Wm. F. H. Bergfeld, John Smith, Jr., and H. J. Lodwig, elders; O. Neitzel, Jacob Bickman and Hughes, second board; A. Arndt, John Smith, Jr., Henry Miller, Herman Arndt, Wm. Bickman, H. Kurtz, F. Koppel and Frank Bickmann, deacons and deaconesses.

REV. F. H. KRETZSCHMAR

The Rev. F. H. Kretzschmar was born in Saxony, Germany, July 26th, 1880, and in the following year emigrated to this country with his parents, making Waterloo, Iowa, their permanent home. There he grew to manhood, attending the parochial and public schools of that city. At the age of 21 he chose the ministry as his life's calling through the urging of his parents, his pastor and a dear friend, and accordingly entered Concordia Theological Seminary of the Missouri Lutheran Synod, at Springfield, Ill., graduating into the ministry in 1906.

In Missionary Field

His first charge was an extensive missionary field in McPherson county, South Dakota, and McIntosh county, North Dakota. After three years service he was called to accept a charge at Wilmot, South Dakota. In 1912 he was called to this state, accepting a pastorate at Fall Creek, Wis. After eight year faithful work there, Immanuel Lutheran Church, of this city, called him to succeed the Rev. Pautz as their pastor and he began his pastorate here in July, 1920.

He is married and has one daughter, Laura, a fourth grade pupil at the Parish school. Rev. Kretzschmar is second vice-president of the northern Wisconsin district of the Missouri Synod, and also visitor of the Wisconsin Rapids circuit, comprising 14 pastors and their parishes.

What Is Your Brand Of Notoriety ?

Picture patrons who are tired of make-believe and want true-to-life screen stories will get their fill in the eight-reel society drama of a girl who fell for false flattery. The picture looks as if it is taken from real life, and is called "Notoriety." Six favorite stars, and a brilliant director make this production stand out head and shoulders above the average.

The story is based on fact, not fancy, and carries truth with it. The settings are faithful—pathetic in the tenement house scenes and brilliant and dazzling in the ballroom sets. The cast is also flawless, and has none but stars—Maurine Powers, Mary Alden, Rod La Rocque, George Hackathorne, Richard Travers, J. Barney Sherry and Anders Randolf.

"I Want To Be Admired"—Cried the Tenement Girl in "Notoriety." She got what she wanted—She was Admired—but it was for her weakness. Not her Virtue.

"Send Me To Prison!"

"Keep me in my cell," begged the tenement girl in Will Nigh's life-like photoplay—

"NOTORIETY"

"When I was innocent nobody noticed me. But now that I'm mixed up in a society scandal, everybody admires me. The papers are full of my pictures. I DON'T WANT TO BE FREED—I WANT TO STAY IN PRISON AND BE TALKED ABOUT!"

ED LEWIS DEFENDS CHAMPIONSHIP IN STRUGGLE TONIGHT

GARDINI, ITALIAN CHAMP, WILL FURNISH THE OPPOSITION; LEWIS SHOULD WIN IN OPINION OF MANY

Chicago—Lou Daro's "Stampede" Lewis will defend his title against Renato Gardini, the Italian challenger, in the main event of the wrestling show to be conducted by the Midway A. C. at the Coliseum tonight. The main bout will go on at 10 o'clock and the show will open at 8:15 o'clock.

Lewis and Gardini are not strangers to local followers of wrestling. Strangler has shown his wares in these parts before he won the title from Stanislaus Zbyszko some two years ago, and has defended it with success ever since. Gardini is a strong favorite with the wrestling public, and the Italians are certain to turn out in force to lend their moral support to their countryman.

Lewis' Headlock Deadly

Although the Italian claims to have a defense for the headlock, the hold which has spelled defeat for so many challengers, chances are Lewis will toss his opponent with the lock as soon as the men have been on the mat long enough to test each other's strength. Gardini may apply the double wrist lock and short arm scissors to cripple the champion's arms, but close followers of the game figure Lewis has too much class.

In the past champions have been dethroned when least expected, and the same may happen to Lewis. Gardini is a worthy opponent and has earned the right to meet the champion by beating some of the leading heavyweights. Renato is fast and aggressive and knows practically every dangerous lock known to the wrestling game. He will be outweighed fifteen or twenty pounds, but expects to offset this handicap with speed and cleverness.

Genaro in Gardini's Corner.

It will be a finish match, best two in three falls. There will be a fifteen minute intermission between the falls and Charley Levine will be the third man in the ring. Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, will be in Gardini's corner to give whatever aid possible.

Dick Daviscourt and Jack Roller, California heavyweights, will meet in a one-fall match to a finish with a one hour time limit. Mazzreno Paggi, an Italian light heavyweight, will open the show in a one-fall match against a local grappler.

Spinners War On Dyers

MANCHESTER, A protest has been made to the Master Cotton Spinners Association by British dyers against the action of the spinners in sending the goods to Belgium to be dyed. The trade has been affected seriously in Lancashire.

The manufacturers claim they are able to send the goods to Belgium to be dyed and then send them back to England at less cost than to have the work done here, and refuse to change their plans unless the price is decreased.

Little Chance For Varsity Baseball Team At Marquette

Milwaukee, Wis.—Chances for baseball as a major varsity sport at Marquette this season are extremely remote, but there is every liklihood that next year will find the Hilltop represented by a strong nine.

This has been Marquette's best year in all branches of sports and it was thought likely with the presence of good material, that a baseball squad would be organized with Coach Frank Murray, formerly of Tufts, to guide it. Because of lack of grounds, the plan has practically been abandoned.

Next year, with the stadium grounds at their disposal, it is probable that there will be a team.

Sturm Back To Commence Work On Golf Course

Joe Sturm, Bull's-Eye Country Club professional, arrived in Wisconsin Rapids yesterday, and plans to start whipping the local course into shape for play as soon as weather conditions permit.

Fresh from Belleair, Florida, where he has spent the winter months in playing exhibition matches and giving instruction, Mr. Sturm was a little taken aback to run into a snow storm. While he will not be able to commence work on the course as early as had been anticipated, he expressed confidence that he would be able to start within a week or two, and that the course this year would show a big improvement over last.

Plans for this year include the continuation of work on the greens started last year, the general building up of the fairway, an possibly the construction of a number of artifical hazards on such holes as are not already blessed with a sufficient number of natural ones. The two new greens, on holes eight and nine, which were constructed under his supervision last year, will be ready for play this spring, Mr. Sturm said.

Among the improvements which the club is contemplating this year is the installation of lockers in the men's shower room in the basement of the club house. This will provide a convenience that was greatly missed last year. It is also planned to convert the small building used by Mr. Sturm last year into a shop for the repair and manufacture of clubs.

Lord Robert Cecil, English statesman, is to be entertained at luncheon today by the Federal Council of Church, in New York City.

OLD ELI EXPECTS GREAT CREW THIS SPRING IN BOATS

CAMPUS EXPECTS A CREW THAT WILL MAKE GREAT SHOWING IN RACES; BEST MATERIAL IN THIRTY YEARS

New Haven.—The Yale crews that take the water this spring under the direction of Coach Ed Leader will be more like the famous Bob Cook crews of a quarter of a century ago than any at Yale since the Cook stroke was abandoned in 1908.

This is the belief of the men who have been following rowing at Yale for more 30 years, who have seen Cook crews row to many a brilliant victory, who have watched coaches at Yale come and go with an infinite variety of strokes and theories, who have seen Yale vainly trying to "settle down" with a definite rowing policy, and who now believe that they have in Coach Leader a man who more closely approaches the methods of Cook than any one who has taught at Yale in recent years.

Use Cook Stroke

Whether a return to the Cook stroke means a return to the era of Yale supremacy on the water is a question that is arousing keen interest and many hopes in the Blue boathouse this year.

Just what significance a return to the methods of Cook can have at Yale would be hard to realize were it not for an understanding of what his name represents in the rowing history of the Blue.

To all Yale men Bob Cook is a tradition. His age was the "Golden Age" of rowing at Yale, when the Blue crews took the water year after year with a confidence that was unbeatable. That age has long since passed, but the Bulldog ever looks forward with grim hope to a renaissance. Whether this year will bring even the beginning of stability to Yale rowing is something that is being eagerly watched.

English Stroke Banned

The stroke that is being taught at Yale today is essentially the same stroke that Cook brought back from England after his now historic trip there in 1873. It may differ in some slights details, as in the finish, but fundamentally it has the same characteristics. It is the same adaptation of the English stroke that Cook developed, and which was later dropped when Yale's succession of English coaches introduced the genuine English stroke that in some way never quite seemed to fit American oarsmen.

One of the first steps that Leader has taken at Yale is to restore the old indoor rowing tank that for several years had been floored over for the use of the wrestling team. There he sat the oarsmen in a straight line over the keel as Cook had done instead of seating them in the zig-zag English fashion. He requested swivel oarlocks instead of the English thole-pin model, though the thole-pin is highly rated by the English because its click at the end of each stroke is a mechanical aid to precision.

He has brought his own boat builder with him, discarding the type of shell imported by the English coaches. His model seats the oarsmen higher above the water. All these features of his mechanical equipment were characteristic of Cook's era.

But the parallel does not end here. In his demands on the oarsmen themselves, Leader has followed Cook. He urges the necessity of a greater perfection of backboard work, and precision of the bodies throughout the stroke, a distinct difference from the English coaches who paid more attention to waterman ship.

A National Radio and Electrical Exposition will be opened in San Francisco today and continued through the remainder of the week.

The cases of Charles W. Morse and others charged with conspiracy in wartime shipping transactions are again scheduled for trial today in Washington, D. C.

HISTORY OF YOUR CHURCH

Every week the Tribune will run the history of one Wisconsin Rapids church and the life story of its pastor.

EAST SIDE LUTHERAN CHURCH

In tracing the history of the church, now commonly known as the East Side Lutheran Church, back to its earliest dates it was found that exact records are unavailable and it was necessary to rely solely upon the reminiscences of its charter members, a number of whom are still living in this city. According to these reminiscences German Lutheran church work dates back to the periods immediately following the civil war, 1865 to 1869, when two traveling ministers, S. Esthel and P. Hoffman, preached in this city intermittently for several years.

Services in Home

Services were first held in the old John Plenke, Sr. home on the corner of Wisconsin and Ninth streets. The beginning was small and quite unpretentious, rough pine plank lumber being placed across chairs to provide seats for those attending. With the exception of these services in the John Plenke home the services were few and far between and some of the people, in order to feed their starving souls and especially partake of Holy Communion, would attend the Lutheran churches at Kellner and the Town of Sigel, often walking the entire distances.

Later, because of increasing attendance, services were held in the old court house, on First street north, and were conducted by the Rev. F. Leyhe, of the Kellner Lutheran Church. In 1883 Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Congregation was formally organized and incorporated with a membership of approximately 40 families and the Rev. F. Leyhe was installed as first pastor. In this year the first church building was erected and dedicated with much rejoicing.

Served 19 Years

In 1886 the Rev. Julius Bittner assumed charge of the work as the first resident pastor and during his 19 years of untiring, unselfish labor the congregation experienced continuous and phenomenal growth, building a parish school and acquiring a parsonage.

Following Rev. Bittner, the Rev. H. Marck served the church until May, 1912 and during his pastorate the present spacious and beautiful church edifice was erected and dedicated. In 1912 Rev. Marck was succeeded by the Rev. F. W. Pautz, who served the parish faithfully for eight years. He was succeeded by the present pastor, the Rev. F. H. Kretzschmar, in July, 1920. During all these years the parish grew until it now numbers 250 families and over 800 souls.

Fine Parish School

Intimately connected and interwoven with the life and progress of this parish is the history of its christian day school. The members were at all times keenly alive to the fact that a generation of God-fearing church members and christian citizens can be reared solely by christian training, with the church substituting for and supplementing the home training through the medium of a parish school.

Because of this knowledge we find a little school building near the church away back in 1888 playing its part in the life of the parish, the pastor being its first teacher. In 1890 Mr. Schaefer, a graduate of the Lutheran Teachers College, Addison, Ill., was called as the first regular teacher, serving three years. Other teachers serving the school at various periods were: Hugo Ohlsen, Herman Tewes, H. Richert, and L. Boriack; with the Misses Regina Rohrlack, Clara Knoll and Doris Kleberg as intermittent assistants. The present faculty consists of the following: Mr. E. H. Voskamp, principal; and Miss Doris Zilz, teacher. The present school has an enrollment of 114 and a most desirable location on the corner of Oak and Eleventh streets.

Church Officers

The officers of the congregation are as follows: A. J. Ladwig, chairman; E. H. Voskamp, recording secretary; H. C. Behrens, financial secretary. Wm. C. Schroedel, treasurer; P. Kappel, Herman Knuth and Herman Plenke, trustees.

W. Rickman, H. Karnatz, A. Arndt, Julius Krumrei, Wm. Fahl, F. Blanchfield, John Smith, Jr., and H. J. Ladwig, elders; O. Neitzel, John Rickman and John Plenke, school board; A. Arndt, John Smith, Jr., Harry Miller, Herman Arndt, Wm. Rickman, H. Knuth, P. Kappel and Frank Rickman, finance committee.

A fine, spiritual, helpful activity manifests itself in the auxiliary organizations within the congregation, which are the Ladies' Aid and the Walther League young people's societies. The Ladies' Aid numbers 100 active members, with the following as officers: Mrs. Herman Plenke, president; Mrs. H. Karnatz, vice president; Mrs. P. Kappel, secretary; and Mrs. Charles Will, treasurer. The Walther League membership, both senior and junior departments, is about 60.

An educational information service for the use of locomotive engineers in sending their sons and daughters to college has been established by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

REV. F. H. KRETZSCHMAR

The Rev. F. H. Kretzschmar was born in Saxony, Germany, July 26th, 1880, and in the following year emigrated to this country with his parents, making Waterloo, Iowa, their permanent home. There he grew to manhood, attending the parochial and public schools of that city. At the age of 21 he chose the ministry as his life's calling through the urging of his parents, his pastor and a dear friend, and accordingly entered Concordia Theological Seminary of the Missouri Lutheran Synod, at Springfield, Ill., graduating into the ministry in 1906.

In Missionary Field

His first charge was an extensive missionary field in McPherson county, South Dakota, and McIntosh county, North Dakota. After three years service he was called to accept a charge at Wilmot, South Dakota. In 1912 he was called to this state, accepting a pastorate at Fall Creek, Wis. After eight years faithful work there, Immanuel Lutheran Church, of this city, called him to succeed the Rev. Pautz as their pastor and he began his pastorate here in July, 1920.

He is married and has one daughter, Laura, a fourth grade pupil at the Parish school. Rev. Kretzschmar is second vice-president of the northern Wisconsin district of the Missouri Synod, and also visitor of the Wisconsin Rapids circuit, comprising 14 pastors and their parishes.

ED LEWIS DEFENDS CHAMPIONSHIP IN STRUGGLE TONIGHT

GARDINI, ITALIAN CHAMP, WILL FURNISH THE OPPOSITION; LEWIS SHOULD WIN IS OPINION OF MANY

Chicago—(Ap. "Strangler" Lewis, will defend his title against Renato Gardini, the Italian challenger, in the main event of the mat show to be conducted by the Midwest A. C. at the Coliseum tonight. The main bout will go on at 10 o'clock and the show will open at 8:15 o'clock.

Lewis and Gardini are not strangers to local followers of wrestling. Strangler has shown his wares in these parts before he won the title from Stanislaus Zbyszko some two years ago, and has defended it with success ever since. Gardini is a strong favorite with the wrestling public, and the Italians are certain to turn out in force to lend their moral support to their country man.

Lewis' Headlock Deadly

Although the Italian claims to have a defense for the headlock, the hold which has spelled defeat for so many challengers, chances are Lewis will toss his opponent with the lock as soon as the men have been on the mat long enough to test each other's strength. Gardini may apply the double wrist lock and short arm scissors to cripple the champion's arms, but close followers of the game figure Lewis has too much class.

In the past champions have been dethroned when least expected, and the same may happen to Lewis. Gardini is a worthy opponent and has earned the right to meet the champion by beating some of the leading heavyweights. Renato is fast and aggressive and knows practically every dangerous lock known to the wrestling game. He will be outweighed fifteen or twenty pounds, but expects to offset this handicap with speed and cleverness.

Genaro in Gardini's Corner.

It will be a finish match, best two in three falls. There will be a fifteen minute intermission between the falls and Charley Levine will be the third man in the ring. Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, will be in Gardini's corner to give whatever aid possible.

Dick Daviscourt and Jack Roller, California heavyweights, will meet in a one-fall match to a finish with a one hour time limit. Mazzreno Paggi, an Italian light heavyweight, will open the show in a one-fall match against a local grappler.

Spinners War On Dyers

MANCHESTER, A protest has been made to the Master Cotton Spinners Association by British dyers against the action of the spinners in sending the goods to Belgium to be dyed. The trade has been affected seriously in Lancashire.

The manufacturers claim they are able to send the goods to Belgium to be dyed and then send them back to England at less cost than to have the work done here, and refuse to change their plans unless the price is decreased.

Little Chance For Varsity Baseball Team At Marquette

Milwaukee, Wis.—Chances for baseball as a major varsity sport at Marquette this season are extremely remote, but there is every liklihood that next year will find the Hilltop represented by a strong nine.

This has been Marquette's best year in all branches of sports and it was thought likely ,with the presence of good material, that a baseball squad would be organized with Coach Frank Murray, formerly of Tufts, to guide it. Because of lack of grounds, the plan has practically been abandoned.

Next year, with the stadium grounds at their disposal, it is probable that there will be a team.

Sturm Back To Commence Work On Golf Course

Joe Sturm, Bull's-Eye Country Club professional, arrived in Wisconsin Rapids yesterday, and plans to start whipping the local course into shape for play as soon as weather conditions permit.

Fresh from Belleair, Florida, where he has spent the winter months in playing exhibition matches and giving instruction, Mr. Sturm was a little taken aback to run into a snow storm. While he will not be able to commence work on the course as early as had been anticipated, he expressed confidence that he would be able to start within a week or two, and that the course this year would show a big improvement over last.

Plans for this year include the continuation of work on the greens started last year, the general building up of the fairway, an possibly the construction of a number of artifical hazards on such holes as are not already blessed with a sufficient number of natural ones. The two new greens, on holes eight and nine, which were constructed under his supervision last year, will be ready for play this spring, Mr. Sturm said.

Among the improvements which the club is contemplating this year is the installation of lockers in the men's shower room in the basement of the club house. This will provide a convenience that was greatly missed last year. It is also planned to convert the small building used by Mr. Sturm last year into a shop for the repair and manufacture of clubs.

Lord Robert Cecil, English statesman, is to be entertained at luncheon today by the Federal Council of Church, in New York City.

OLD ELI EXPECTS GREAT CREW THIS SPRING IN BOATS

CAMPUS EXPECTS A CREW THAT WILL MAKE GREAT SHOWING IN RACES; BEST MATERIAL IN THIRTY YEARS

New Haven.—The Yale crews that take the water this spring under the direction of Coach Ed Leader will be more like the famous Bob Cook crews of a quarter of a century ago than any at Yale since the Cook stroke was abandoned in 1908.

This is the belief of the men who have been following rowing at Yale for more 30 years, who have seen Cook crews row to many a brilliant victory, who have watched coaches at Yale come and go with an infinite variety of strokes and theories, who have seen Yale vainly trying to "settle down" with a definite rowing policy, and who now believe that they have in Coach Leader a man who more closely approaches the methods of Cook than any one who has taught at Yale in recent years.

Use Cook Stroke

Whether a return to the Cook stroke means a return to the era of Yale supremacy on the water is a question that is arousing keen interest and many hopes in the Blue boathouse this year.

Just what significance a return to the methods of Cook can have at Yale would be hard to realize were it not for an understanding of what his name represents in the rowing history of the Blue.

To all Yale men Bob Cook is a tradition. His age was the "Golden Age" of rowing at Yale, when the Blue crews took the water year after year with a confidence that was unbeatable. That age has long since passed, but the Bulldog ever looks forward with grim hope to a renuissance. Whether this year will bring even the beginning of such hope to Yale rowing is something that is being eagerly watched.

English Stroke Banned

The stroke that is being taught at Yale today is essentially the same stroke that Cook brought back from England after his now historic trip there in 1873. It may differ in some slights details, as in the finish, but fundamentally it has the same characteristics. It is the same adaptation of the English stroke that Cook developed, and which was later dropped when Yale's succession of English coaches introduced the genuine English stroke that in some way never quite seemed to fit American oarsmen.

One of the first steps that Leader has taken at Yale is to restore the old indoor rowing tank that for several years had been fixed over for the use of the wrestling team. There he sat the oarsmen in a straight line over the keel as Cook had done instead of seating them in the zig-zag English fashion. He requested swivel oarlocks instead of the English thole-pin model, though the thole-pin is highly rated by the English because its click at the end of each stroke is a mechanical aid to precision.

He has brought his own boat builder with him, discarding the type of shell imported by the English coaches. His model seats the oarsmen higher above the water. All these features of his mechanical equipment were characteristic of Cook's era.

But the parallel does not ned here. In his demands on the oarsmen themselves, Leader has followed Cook. He urges the necessity of a greater perfection of oar work, and precision of the bodies throughout the stroke, a distinct difference from the English coaches who paid more attention to waterman ship.

A National Radio and Electrical Exposition will be opened in San Francisco today and continued through the remainder of the week.

The cases of Charles W. Morse and others charged with conspiracy in wartime shipping transactions are again scheduled for trial today in Washington, D. C.
